[From Our Regular Correspondent.] WASHINGTON, March 19 .- The idea has prevailed that outside of the appropriation bills and the amendments very little legislation, if any, would be attempted at this session; and yet Mr. Voorbees, in the Senate, introduced several bills to-day, and other senators followed his example. It was also rumored this evening that Mr. Sparks will offer the army bill as it passed the House last session, including the Butler amendment providing for the establishment of a railroad telegraphic system for the transmission of commercial and press messages. The initiative movement for the consideration of the Geneva-award matter has been taken in the Senate, and all this looks as if members meant to press any bill likely to pass which will help their constituents. I asked a member of the House what he thought would be the length of the session, and he said not over six weeks. A senator the requisite appropriations for legislative soon afterwards remarked that Congress could get through in three weeks. My own judgment is that no one knows anything about it.
